His message to young professionals:-

After completion of near about twenty years in corporate life he came across the reactions of domination and near about slavery in between senior management and operating team. The relations mostly are based on remuneration formula. Nothing is achieved in review meetings between two except quarreling and fighting. The innovations coming from inside are essential for emerging technology area, open innovations are essential for organizational growth. In this letter to the employees in poignantly recounted the inception of the company and asked them to stay focused and continue delivering their best customers. When he was offered huge bags of money to leave Mind Tree away he said "our polite refusal has been interested as foolish idealism of a bunch of lower middle class folks that we are" he added, 'our dominant profile is like our DNA, it cannot be fundamentally changed. Formal assessments might play a great role in leading us to the right path. Sometimes we think we are leopards though we might be actually a Jackal. <sup>[1]</sup>

He speaks about four key pillars of success which are

- i) Humility- Need to be receptive.
- ii) Learning from unusual sources- Learn from one context and apply to the others.
- iii) Practice mental agility- practice for avoiding displacement.
- iv) Sense of purpose- Purpose determines your power. <sup>[2]</sup>

His views on purpose of life:-

According to Bagchi the combination of our education, experience network, worth family and body makes us who we are? Our platform is made up of taking all together such things from where we can launch ourselves. It is like a railway platform from where you can reach your destination thus platform is your purpose of life. Low platform or low purpose is the matter of choice. Low category people with low purpose done compare themselves with others

Low platform having high purpose are path makers 'People in NGO's can be counted in this category. High platform low purpose people are competent people but purpose is Limited to them. High platform high purpose people have a sense of legacy. He his sited examples of Narayan Murthy, Azim Premji and Manmohan Singh. They are responsible for the future in which they will not exist. Dalai Lama has not been able to make Tibet a reality but that doesn't differ him from has purpose and his efforts which are for a future, Tibet which he may not even live to see. <sup>[3]</sup>

According to him his own peers in the industry and academicians are responsible for the biggest enigma regarding the media coverage of company results and they gadget they launches media usually blame the industry for not proving actuality of the company and working conditions in IT establishments.

The notion of competence in journalism says Bagchi' is based on placing greeted value of chasing Reuters Feed rather than taking six weeks to complete a well-researched piece, "If this is what we value more why should we waste time an research" The media does not really understand issues related to the inception, growing up pains and challenges of anybody who is not big B <sup>[4]</sup>

According to him our lack of affection for research is a national problem look at the quality of research produced by Indian academic. It is our single biggest drawback as a nation Industry suffers from same mentality. He has given the example of stepping down of N.R. Narayan Murthy, founder of Infosys, marked as "going down of mid-day sun for the industry. There was not a day when an industry issue was not front page news. The media spoke to Narayan Murthy on reservation issue, Bangalore Airport, new education policy. He added that IT industry like Bollywood or Indian political system needs 'poster child, a company CEO cannot become a poster child or social icon but every industry needs 'a visible pipeline of stars' <sup>(5)</sup> He further argued that the industry had to complete with construction, infrastructure development, retails healthcare and several other sectors. Indian companies says Bagchi, do not realize that content has a role and power to build legacy. Karl Marx is dead, but 'Das Capital' remains you can create content only when you have a sense of legacy. But content cannot be written by a PR agency, it has to come from industry.

His concept of success: - In the words of Bagchi

Success is not about the unfolding of thought process, of dialogues and continuum success to me is about vision I is the ability to rise above the immediacy of pain. It is about imagination. It is about sensitivity to small people. It is about building inclusion. It is about connectedness to a larger world existence. It is about sensitivity to small people. It is about building inclusion. It is about connectedness to a larger world existence. It is about person's tenacity. It is about giving back more to life than you take out of it of is about creating extra-ordinary success with ordinary lives <sup>(6)</sup>

The success is your ability to rise above your discomfort, what every may be your current state. You can rise your consciousness if you want, above your immediate surroundings. Never measure personal success and sense of wellbeing through material possessions.

Teaching of his parents

Bagchi's parents set the foundation of his life and the value system which made him what he is today. Followings are ten morals which his father inculcate in him.

- i) Never use govt. property for personal use, as his father was government officer, he never used the office jeep for his personal and family use. He used it only to tours the interiors, he would walk to his office on normal days that was early childhood lesson in governance.
- ii) Treat small people with more respect than how you treat be people. It is more important to respect your subordinates than your superiors.
- iii) His father used to say. You should leave your newspaper and your toilet, the way you expect to find it. The lesson for Bagchi about showing consideration to others Business begins and ends with that simple percept
- iv) His mother always prepared a garden wherever often, the garden prepared by her was of no use to her and when she was asked," why she takes such toil for others? She answered "I have to create a blood in desert and wiener I am given a new place. I must leave it more beautiful than what I had inherited" Till death he measured his success in terms of larger connectedness.

According to Bagchi imagination is everything, if we can imagine a future, we can create it, if we can create that future. Others will live in it. That is the essence of success. When his mother was totally blind and when she was eighty years of age, she did her morning yoga every day, swept her own room, and washed her own clothes. For him success is about the sense of independence it is about not seeing the world but seeing the light.

- v) On the deathbed of Sufderjung hospital in Delhi, his father was concerned about the overworked nurse than his own state. There Bagchi learnt that there was no limit to how concerned you can be for another human being and what the limit of inclusion is you can create. The success of his father was defined by his principles his frugality, his universalism and his sense of inclusion. There was diversity in political outlook of his father and mother, on moor issues concerning the world, the two had differing opinions. The succe3ss is in the power of disagreement, of dialogues and the essence of living with diversity in thinking. Success is not about the ability to create a definitive dogmatic end state it is about the unfolding of thought process of dialogue and continuum.

CONCLUSION:

In a world engrossed in materialism, the advice of Subroto Bagchi to entrepreneurs is stimulating. He underlines the importance He underlines the importance of values in order to achieve that real success in life. In his opinion, the world would be a much better place if we look beyond our self-serving interest and work for the greater good of humanity.
